About the Training

In 2005, the Salzburg Principles were established in the Bologna Process as the basis of the reforms for doctoral education. In the half decade that has passed since then, Europe's universities have carried out wide-ranging reforms in this area, most notably by establishing doctoral schools. The achievements and experiences of Europe's universities affirm and enrich the original principles<sup>1</sup>.

The Salzburg Principles were established to serve as a guiding instrument to the universities across Europe. Their chief objective is to make a connection between the European Research Area and the European Higher Education Area by building a common framework and using the PhD concept in pursuance of reconnecting the university with the society, economy and industry.

The numerous problems and difficulties of designing, managing and delivering quality doctoral education has been recognized throughout Europe, and not only the Republic of Armenia.

With an aim to familiarize and inspire the Armenian academic community with diverse "PhD models" from around the world, the foreseen training will gather a group of renowned expert-lecturers who will elaborate the models applied at their home universities and countries. During the training, "case study examples" from Austria, Germany, United Kingdom and Sweden will be presented to the audience, which will be comprised of representatives from the management, teaching staff, and students from all Armenian public universities.

This training provides an opportunity for Armenian higher education institutions to share their knowledge and experiences, with an aim to establish common Standards in PhD education in Armenia. The different profiles and visions of the Armenian institutions are on one hand an advantage, yet on another they represent a challenge for future activities associated with the Tempus VERITAS project implementation at the Armenian universities. This training will support all universities in their efforts to adopt and implement new Standards in line with the European Higher Education Area initiatives.

Learning outcomes: Gained knowledge about the EU and the Armenian system of PhD education, knowledge about adoption of the new guidelines in the frame of Salzburg Principles and its implementation to the Armenian system of higher education.

The intent of the training on Salzburg Principles is for the Armenian universities to utilize the newly acquired knowledge as an important instrument for future activities and project outcomes, as well as to have a better approach in the creation of university strategies and appropriate standards as foreseen by the VERITAS project.
